ROBERT CENEDELLA Sutton Gallery, 29 W. 57th St.

Robert Cenedella has a vigorous eye for the grotesque and horrendously pathetically comic in human character. His color is rich; reds, yellows, greens, oranges, singing in shrill, attractive harmony, expending themselves in anarchic, multi-figure compositions dedicated to moral squalor.

"Santa Fe Rider," an unforgettable monolithic image of a motorcycle stormtrooper, performs a tire-squealing, rubber-burning "wheelie" atop the brow of a hill, his violet-red, flag-bedecked, saddle-bagged steed, insigniaed leather jacket and German helmet, stamping their imprint indelibly on the landscape beyond, half of it urban, industrialized and polluted, the rest relatively pristine farmland. Behold...cometh the redeemer.
